Empreinte d'alleurs / Frédéric Dahm

In 1885, Jean Ducerf built his first sawmill in Burgundy, at the very heart of one of Europe's largest forest. Generation after generation, the family-owned group grew, spread, established new sites in France, implemented innovative processes and exported to many countries, while evolving with the market. At Ducerf, wood is considered holistically, together with all its applications. The group carries out the first and second transformation of various hardwood species, and mostly oak timber. Concerned about the environment, the family-owned business has adopted an ecologically responsible approach each day. A perfect way to lead by example and contribute to sustainable development. Today, Ducerf Group has become the leader in the timber industry, with very clear motivations: quality, innovation and passion.
